

Monday morning
My dear Miss Cushman.

Thanks you for your note. Her sight of your hand writing was pleasant indeed.
I will tell you why I did not call on Thursday - I arrived at Miss Gillis' rooms before she did - poor Miss she was in a world of trouble & anxiety and from the threats of that horrible man. How important is law to help the weak! If you have half an hour to spare go & call on her for it will do her good to see & hear you. - I sat with her quite to my own surprise until 3 o'clock & you had told me I must come before 4. As you were going to Mr. Charlis - I therefore did not run over while to call for a few minutes when I might find you dropping - besides which we meant to have been in Town on Friday to have seen you in Lady Macbeth - which I wanted very.

We set off - but were caught in the terrible thunder storm & were obliged willy nilly to make the best of our way home again - I fancied all day yesterday you would come - Your room was in order for you but you came not - You are certainly I see - you must be invited - We have a bed also for your brother now that Mr. Miller is gone - so do not scruple in coming. Yours

Friday we will be right glad to see you - but come to stay all night - & tell us ^{them} all your adventures. I have not done again to work hard at my translation - so that your coming may be your pleasant talk will make a charming occasion - I shall be very glad to see you glad that Miss "Gardner" ladies are doing the polite to you - Lady Blenheim will be with you - If you do

You will be charmed with Miss Whitford. She is one of my husband's old flames - My impression is that Miss Whitford will not let you return on Thursday - She will have to drive all about the wood-bawery lanes from the house of one hearty country man to another - If you are tempted to stay over the night do - & we will be just as glad to see you on Saturday - creature, do not know yourself now, what will you do in trials!

I rejoice in the thought the whole world's gratitude ~~is~~ which will one day be yours. —

May God bless you write in haste. I write with love

Dear Miss Cushman

Yours ever
W. Hewitt
