EVENING TRANSCRIPT.

TUESDAY EVENING, OCT 31.

CANALS. The Hon Henry Wheaton, minister of the United States at Berlin, in a letter to J. Markoe Jr Esq, Corresponding Secretary of the National Institute at Washington, on the topic of "Impending Revolutions in the Commercial Intercourse of the World," goes very fully into that long talked-of subject—the vast importance of opening a new route from Europe and the United States to the East Indies and the western coast of America, by an artificial communication between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans across either the Isthmus of Nicaragua or Panama. He treats the subject in a most thorough manner; and, going into the history of this project with ample detail, shows very conclusively what has been done, and what may be accomplished by energy and perseverance in effecting a gigantic work that will be sure to effect an impending Revolution in the commercial world.

To show the practicability of such a work being carried to a successful issue, he cites the stupendous canal in the North of Scotland, called "the Caledonian canal," which stretches across the Island from northeast to southwest—from a point near Inverness on Murray Frith to another near Fort William, on the western coast, opposite to the Isle of Mull—constructed by excavations of twenty-one and a half miles in extent, and a lockage of one hundred and ninety feet—the total length of the canal, including the lakes, is fifty-eight and three-fourths miles twenty feet deep, fifty feet wide at the bottom, and one hundred and twenty two at the top. The locks are twenty feet deep; one hundred and seventy-two long, and forty feet broad. Frigates of thirty-two guns, and merchant ships of one thousand tons pass through it. This canal was constructed at the expense of Government. Cost £986,942 sterling.

But, the most stupendous work of this kind in Europe, and perhaps in the world, is the ship-canal from Amsterdam to Niewdiep, near the Helder, constructed by the Dutch Government. The length of the canal is fifty and a half miles, the breadth at the surface of the water, is one hundred and twenty-four and a half feet; the breadth at the bottom, thirty-six feet; and the depth twenty feet and nine inches; requiring only two tide locks at the two ends. With a broad towing-path on each side, the canal is wide enough to admit of one frigate's passing another. Cost twelve million of guilders—something more than the Caledonian canal.

These great hydraulic works show what may be accomplished by the power of man for the good of nations.

CHEAP LITERATURE. WILLIS, in a late letter to the Intelligencer, gives the following hints and hits, for and at some of our publishing houses:

Villanous edition, villanous cheap, are the fruits of our present law of copyright, and if we had an American language all to ourselves, there would be no such thing as beauty in a book. Fortunately, England has the same brick from Babel, and we can corrupt, mutilate, defile, and misprint works of genius, and still import from our more liberal and appreciative fatherland a purer and worthier copy. Still it seems to me surprising that, of the publishers who have grown rich with pirating in this country, no one has felt inclined to distinguish himself by a school of fine editions. One would think the example of Aldus, who made himself as famous as the authors he printed, would be stuff for emulation; and there are some men, probably, even among publishers, who agree with Charles Edwards, that "it is the devil to be growing old as a person of no peculiarity." Aldus's press lasted eminent for near a hundred years, and it is recorded in history that his ink was excellent, his types beautiful, his paper invariable strong and white, and, above all, that his press was next to infallible for correctness. Celerity among bookbinders probably sprung from this renown of a printer, and in France and England there were famous names in this trade also. Roger Payne received from twenty to thirty guineas for binding a single volume, and he is much better remembered than any Lord Mayor of his time. There has been a mania in bookbinding, however, and the world is too practical for such matters now. Jeffery a London bookseller, had Fox's History bound in fox-skin, and an eccentric bibliomanist named (descriptively) Askew, had a book bound in a human skin! In the library at Konigsburg there are twenty books bound in silver. Very far short of all this, however, there is, in this country, an unreached point of excellence in binding, and great opening for an ambitious bookbinder to distinguish himself.

The writer of the above, just as his remarks are in the main, seems to have had his memory jogged ere the conclusion of his letter, for he honestly and honorably appends to it a note, of which the following is a copy:

Ticknor, of Boston, expends a praisworthy carefulness on the correctness and beauty of his reprints, and should be excepted from the disparagement of American booksellers. But every press should have a scholar attached to it, and an artist within reach.

MOHAMMED ALI: DESTRUCTIVENESS. In Mr Gliddon's second lecture on Hieroglyphical Literature the following fact was introduced in connection with the solution of various hierological problems. The splendid avenue that leads from the temple of Luxor in Thebes to that of Karnac is flanked for a mile on each side by colossal sphinxes and decorations, and had several of those gigantic portals, called Propylea, which form so grand a feature in Egyptian architecture. Each Pylon is adorned with the sculptures of the Pharaoh who erected it, of which a similar use is made, as of the Tablet of Abydos (already mentioned in a notice in this paper.) The date is about B.C. 1660. "The middle gateway," said Mr Gliddon, "beautiful in proportion, and faced with the purest granite, was the most perfect of all, up to the year 1838, when Mohammed Ali, caused this magnificent Pylon which had defied the Persians and Ptolemy Sathyrus and had stood erect for upwards of 3490 years to be blown up with gunpowder!" This atrocity was perpetrated in order to build an Indigo factory that failed to answer its purpose, and was closed in 1840, and also to construct some saltpetre works that do not pay because the chemists, in their anxiety to obtain a job, forgot that the neighborhood did not furnish a sufficient supply of nitrous earth to suffice for 400 pits. This is only one of the abominations of the recreant crew who, of late years have cursed the land of Egypt.

MR EDITOR: Reports are in circulation that in some of our public schools for girls, it is a practise to inflict corporal punishment. We would ask if this is a regulation authorized by the city government? Have they in their patriarchal concern for the proper rearing of the daughters under their charge, seen fit to resort to this relic of barbarism? We thought that the "ferule" and the "rattan" had long since been abolished from our schools, and that a more rational mode of punishment had taken their place. If this be not so, we earnestly crave our "grave seniors" at once to commence the work of reform. But, admitting that this regulation is sanctioned by the city government, we would inquire whether there can be found a human being in these days of peace and "moral suasion," who has a heart to enforce it in regard to female children—who can raise his hand to strike a female young or old? Can such a person be imagined as living in this our good, peace-loving city! We confess, we can scarcely credit it; and are inclined to believe the report unfounded, or much exaggerated. We beg to be enlightened on the subject. M.

FANCY ARTICLES FOR THE LADIES. Those of our fair readers who are wont to patronize home manufactures, and have a fancy for the tasteful and ornamental of whatever fabric or description—are reminded of the establishment at No 9 Essex street, kept by ANSON PECK, who is constantly supplied with decorative and useful articles to be worn upon the person, or, for personal convenience. Mr Peck manufactures goods from tortoise shell in beauty and finish equal to the imported. He has jewelled side and back combs à la Parisian, fit to adorn the jetty locks of the brunette, or the golden tresses of the blonde; and has besides, an assortment of other nick-nacks in the fancy line. We have examined an admirable specimen of shell dressing-comb manufactured by the dealer, which is finished in a most thorough manner, and can be afforded at a much lower price than the imported, being fully equal to the last in usefulness, durability, and beauty. We recommend Mr Peck's manufacturing house to public attention, and hope that it may receive that encouragement which the emulation of its master deserves.

GENERAL BERTRAND. A large crowd of people assembled in the Park this morning to greet this distinguished officer. A large escort attended the General to the ships of war in the harbor, to Governor's Island and the Navy Yard, at all of which places salutes were fired in his honor. He was accompanied by the Governor of the State and his suite, and by the Municipal officers of the City. [Journal of Commerce.

We learn from the Express that Marshal Bertrand having consented to visit the Bowery Theatre this evening, Mr Hamblin, with that managerial tact that distinguishes his conduct of a theatre, will revive the drama of "Napoleon" on the occasion—a play that represents many of the leading incidents in the life of the great hero.

MR RICHARDSON'S SCHOOL in the Merchant's Exchange, has attracted considerable notice of late, among our Merchants, so much so, that we were induced to make an examination of some of the productions, of the pupils attending this institution.

The systems of Geography and History are the best we have ever seen for conveying correct, and useful information, and the classes in Book Keeping, do their work well; Mr R. as a teacher of Commercial studies has not his superior in this city and we hope he will be returned again to some of our public schools.

MR GLIDDON'S THIRD LECTURE will be delivered this evening. The heads of his subject are as follows: Politics about the times of the 16th Theban Dynasty, or B. C. 2160. Probable cause of the invasion of Hykshos. Definition of the Hykshos. Desolation produced by their conquest of Egypt. Contemporary rule of the Hykshos over Lower Egypt, and of the Egyptians in the Upper Provinces. Influence of these events upon the Hebrews, from Abraham to Joseph. Close of the 17th Dynasty.

THE CITY GREYS, Capt N. A. Thompson, (one of the most thoroughly drilled corps in the Commonwealth) are out today. They will probably be dining at the Pavilion when the majority of our readers are reading this paragraph; and Michael thinks that if they do not dine sumptuously, it will be their own fault—not that of Messrs Lefavor & Fish.

The Brigade Band performed Burditt's new Quickstep as the Greys marched up State street.

Saxton, Peirce & Co have received the November No of the Eclectic Museum, containing a beautiful mezzotint engraving of the "Wolf and the Lamb."

The same publishers have also a work from the press of Campbell & Co, Philadelphia; "The Errors of Romanism traced to their origin in human nature;" by Richard Whateley, D. D, price 25 cents.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT. This morning as a number of men were repairing a house in Winthrop Place, a young man, named Nathaniel Clarke, in throwing down a piece of wood, fell from the top of the house to the sidewalk, bruising himself so severely that his life is despaired of. He is an apprentice of Mr N. F. Rollins, carpenter, and belongs to Exeter, N. H.

JOHN NEAL lectures before the Mercantile Library Association tomorrow evening, on "Ancient and Modern Eloquence." An admirable biographical sketch of Mr Neal will be found on the 4th page of our paper today.

DR LARDNER commences his course of lectures at the Melodeon this evening. Tomorrow we shall give, (on our fourth page) a description, from the Post, of Russell's Planetarium.

ORDINATION. Mr Philip Wolff, a native of Geneva, Switzerland, and a graduate of the Evangelical School of Theology of that city, who has come to this country with the purpose of laboring as a missionary at Grand Ligne, Canada, was last evening prepared for that work by being inducted into the Christian ministry at the Park street church. The following was the order of exercises: Introductory prayer, by the Rev Mr Blagden; Sermon, by the Rev Mr Kirk, from 2d Corinthians, 5th chapter and part of 20th verse, "Now then we are ambassadors of Christ;" Ordaining prayer, by the Rev Dr Jenks; Charge, by the Rev Mr Adams; Right hand of fellowship, by the Rev Mr Rogers; concluding prayer by the Rev Mr Aiken. The services attracted a large congregation, and were throughout interesting and impressive. [Post.

We learn from the Army and Navy Chronicle, that Lieut Addison R. Taliaferro, who was recently tried by Court Martial, at Norfolk, has been sentenced to be cashiered.

The Cincinnati Gazette states that the small pox is quite bad in that city, several cases having been reported in the neighborhood of 7th street and Broadway.

SNOW IN VERMONT. The postmaster at East Randolph writes to Mr Wasson, of the Albany P. O, under date of the 24th, as follows: Snow fell here yesterday two feet. It is now, on a level where it has not drifted twenty inches! The drifts in some places are four feet deep!

DR BROWNLEE. We are pained to state that the health of this beloved brother remains in a precarious state. In some respects an improvement is perceptible. The paralysis of the right side, however, continues, and he remains unable to articulate with an intelligible degree of distinctness. [Christian Intelligencer.

MISS CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN will probably make the grand tour of Mr Macready's engagements with him, southward and westward. It would be an excellent arrangement for both parties, she would immeasurably improve by it, and he would be admirably supported. [New York Express.

The arrival of the Eastern Railroad train, on Sunday evening, was delayed several hours, by an accident which occurred this side of Ipswich. A couple of oxen had selected the track of the railroad, as their resting place for the night, occasioning a collision, when the train came upon them, which threw the engine and tender off the track. Fortunately, no person was injured. [Salem Gazette.

A new system of short hand writing has been introduced to the public, by which, it is said, that any language can be written by the sound of the voice in pronouncing it. The new art is called Phonography, and is considered superior to any system of stenography in use, as the number of characters is much less, while at the same time they can be easily read. There is a man lecturing upon this new art in Connecticut.

MURDER AND ARSON IN BROADWAY. Our city was yesterday morning the scene of a horrid murder, accompanied with arson. About six o'clock it was found that a female, named Ann Leitza, had been burned to death, or more probably murdered, by her husband. The Coroner was summoned. The result of his investigation was that the man stands charged, not only with murdering his wife, but also, with arson, to conceal the crime. [New York Tribune.

PLOWING UP A RAILROAD. We learn that the citizens along the line of the road below Blissfield assembled by general invitation, one day this week; tore up about fifteen rods of the track, built fences and piled up the rubbish, plowed up the soil, and as we are informed, sowed the same to wheat. The mails, in consequence, have been very irregular of late, being brought through from this to Toledo on a wagon. [Adrian (Michigan) Watchtower.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS. There was a collision between the up and down trains on the Utica and Syracuse Railroad on Friday, but no one was hurt. Owing to a heavy snow storm, the trains were not in sight of each other until just before they struck.

The train from the West ran off the track of the Tonawanda Railroad, about 20 miles west of Rochester, and a second class car, with sixteen passengers, was completely overturned. No one was seriously hurt.

MR AUDUBON. The St Louis Republican announces the return of this indefatigable and learned naturalist as follows: "Mr Audubon and party arrived last evening in good health and spirits. He ascended the Missouri to some distance above Fort Union, above the Yellow Stone, and expresses himself much pleased with the excursion. He discovered a number of birds and plants, and brought down with him a variety of curiosities, together with a gray fox, badger, deer, &c, which they succeeded in taking alive. In the spring he proposes to extend his trip to the mountains."

MONROE EDWARDS. We learn, from good authority, that this convict has made a desperate attempt to escape, by firing one of the rooms in the State Prison at Sing Sing. Immediately after the attempt of Edwards was discovered, the fire was promptly put out, and that exigency attended, the gallant Col was tied up to the whipping post and had to receive, as a reward for his rash enterprise, one hundrad lashes on his bare back. Our informant says that Edwards was suffering severely from the effect of the prison discipline. [New York American.

IMPORTANT ARREST. By the arrival of the cars on Thursday evening, Sheriffs Lane and Tufts brought to this town a man by the name of Ebenezer K. Hatch, of Wells, charged with being the person that placed the obstruction on the Railroad track, a few weeks since, causing the death of the Engineer. A train of circumstances led to his arrest, which in all probability will be sufficient to hold him for further trial. He is about 40 years of age, stout and robust. He has a wife and children living in Wells. He appears very much depressed in spirits since his arrival here. [Saco Repository, 27th.

ACQUITTAL OF MR RICKETTS. Extract of a letter from Elkton, Md, dated Saturday, October 28, 1843, 4 o'clock, P. M: The jury in the case of Palmer C. Ricketts, (Editor of the Cecil Whig) indicted for shooting Amos T. Forwood, Esq, in the streets of Elkton on the 30th of August last, have just returned into court with a verdict of acquittal. The defence set up by the accused was justifiable homicide—that the prisoner killed the deceased in his own self-defence. The trial lasted three days, and about fifty witnesses were examined. The defence fully proved that Mr Ricketts was attacked by Mr F. with a large hickory stick in his hand and a pistol in his pocket, and it fully satisfied the jury that the prisioner had killed the deceased to save himself.

FATHER SHOT BY HIS SON. We learn by a letter received on Saturday night from Westbrook, (formerly a part of Saybrook) on Connecticut river, that a fearful tragedy occurred in that town on Friday evening. Mr John Stannard Jr, a wealthy and highly respectable farmer in that town, about fifty years of age, who has a wife and two children, was deliberately shot while at the supper table, by his own son! The family were thus occupied, when Alpheus Stannard, about 24 years of age, went into his chamber somewhat abruptly, and, as it subsequently appeared, loaded his gun. John, the younger son, expressed some apprehensions to the father, and said that he was fearful that Alpheus was about to do something wrong—perhaps shoot some one. When he came down stairs with the gun in his hand, John left the room. The father rose from the table, and approached him, with some exclamation of surprize, apparently for the purpose of seizing the weapon. Alpheus immediately levelled the musket, and shot his father directly in the breast, the ball passing through and coming out of his back. He lived until midnight, when he expired in excrutiating agony. The son seemed quite unconscious of the tragedy in which he had been engaged, and although he has never been suspected of insanity, yet in this murderous act he has exhibited such evidences of it, that we understand he is to be sent immediately to the Retreat at Hartford. The unfortunate father was an estimable man, deacon of the Congregational Church in that town, and himself and family have always lived together in the most affectionate and harmonious manner. [New Haven Courier.

to be continued every Evening, consisting of popular Discourses and Lectures on the most interesting and important in the Physical Sciences, and their application in the Arts.

These entertainments, adapted for the Amusement and information of all persons of ordinary education, will be elucidated by the most ever exhibited in the country, executed by the first London Artists, and constructed and exhibited on such a scale as to suit the largest Theatres.

Among the Mechanical Illustrations, will be included that Splendid Working Model of the Solar System called

RUSSELL'S PLANETARIUM.

TELESCOPIC VIEWS OF THE PLANETS,

Taken generally from Original Drawings, prepared for Dr Lardner by Herschel and other eminent European Astronomers. A Series of Views of

THE MOON,

From Telescopic Drawings by the Prussian Observers, Baer and Madler; of the SOLAR SPOTS, from Drawings by Herschel and others. A great variety of

Scenic Illustrations of Lunar and Solar Eclipses,
THE SEASONS,

And other Astronomical Phenomena; also Meteorological Dioramas of the

AURORA BOREALIS, WATER SPOUTS,

And other Meteors, from Drawings by Lottin, Beechy, &c.

THIS COLLECTION CONSISTS OF ABOVE

TWO HUNDRED DIORAMAS,

Each of which will be exhibited with a magnitude sufficient to be visible in every part of the largest theatres, covering nearly four hundred square feet of canvass.

THIS EVENING, Oct 31st,

THE MOON.

What is its position in the System, its magnitude and motion? How do we obtain a knowledge of these? Physical and Geographical character of the Moon's Surface—Its Mountains, Volcanoes—Is it invested with an atmosphere? Has it oceans, seas, lakes and rivers? or any liquid? Is its light warm? What proportion does its light bear to sunlight? Is it an inhabited globe? What part does it play in the economy of the Universe? What influence does it exert on the Earth? Was it "made to rule the night?" Does it affect the weather? or insanity? or the phenomena of the animal or vegetable kingdom? Do Meteoric Stones come from it?

ILLUSTRATIONS:

1. Illuminated Diagram to explain the Moon's Paraliax.
2. Illuminated Diagram to explain the Lunar Phases.
3. 4. 5. Telescopic Dioramas of the Moon as a crescent, gibbous and full.
6. View of the Earth as seen from the Moon.
7. Telescopic Diorama of the Full Moon, taken with the highest magnifying powers, copied from the celebrated Map of the Moon by Madler.
8. 9. 10. Telescope Views of Scenery in particular localities of the Moon
11. Highly magnified view of the supposed condition of the Crater of a Lunar Volcano.

In the course of the evening, the Planetarium will be from time to time exhibited in motion, and will be explained.

To extend the advantage of these entertainments as widely as possible, consistently with the great expense of the apparatus, and illustrations, the price of admission will be

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS

To commence at seven precisely. oct 31

EVENING TRANSCRIPT.

TUESDAY EVENING, OCT 31

JOHN NEAL. The following graphic sketch of this prolific writer, powerful declaimer, and hard-hitter, appeared in the New York Signal a year or two since, and is evidently from the pen of Park Benjamin:

John Neal was born in Portland, in the State of Maine. He should have been born in New Hampshire—for, though he blazes like a pine log, he is quite as tough as granite. In Portland he passed his youth. His parents were Quakers. He was brought up under a drab hat. At twelve, he was put into a dry goods shop. Dry goods were not to his taste, though he was said to be an adept at getting rid of them. After five years, he began to feel the cacoethes, so determined to indulge his promptings, by turning writing master. This incident is funny enough, for Neal now writes the most "damned, cramped penmanship" that ever tortured a compositor's brain. Impelled by his genius, he next taught drawing; then he took likenesses, and became itinerant; the faces of ever so many country lads and lasses were done and done for by him at three dollars a piece! On his return from his excursion, he became convinced that Portland was too narrow a sphere for his talents to have full swing in, so he went to Boston, and inducted himself into a store where they sold all sorts of varieties—silks and molasses, codfish and ladies albums, and so forth. Finding himself worth one hundred and twenty dollars, he went into wholesale business; but his capital, large as it was, being insufficient for his ambition, he tramped off to New York and sold goods. Having got rich, probably to the extent of another hundred and twenty dollars, he removed to Baltimore, and, in company with Mr Pierpont, the present distintinguished temperance clergyman of Boston, went into the retail and wholesale business combined. They failed. Neal gave up every thing, and was so poor that he had not money enough to take a letter from the Post office.

Neal was at this period twenty-three years of age, and somewhat puzzled to discover by what means he was to earn his daily bread. He had an indomitable and enterprising spirit, and a very indifferent education. The former conquered the latter, and so he determined to take to literature for subsistence. A strange determination for a gentleman whose genius had been hitherto cramped over a yard-stick and scissors! His first essays were criticisms on the works of Byron. These were given to the world in "The Portico," a monthly magazine in Baltimore. He next became engaged as editor of "the Baltimore Telegraph," a daily newspaper. He was at the same time studying the law with great diligence. His industry at this time must have been wonderful—for one who knows him, relates that he had seen in Neal's own hand-writing, copied at that period, four large quarto volumes of Reeve's and Gould's Lectures, with an index; and also four quarto volumes of notes, statutes abridged, cases doubted, &c, following the suggestions of Hoffman's Outlines of Legal Study. He also made a General Index to the first twelve volumes of Niles's Register a task, which the editor characterized, as probably the most laborious work of the kind that ever appeared in any country.

The next publication which Mr Neal laid before the public, was (in 1818) the "Battle of Niagara," a poem without notes, by John O'Cataract E-q. author of "Keep Cool, &c." "Goldau or the Maniac Harper," another poem, was published in the same volume. "John O'Cataract" was the name given to Neal by the Delphian Club of Baltimore, a Club of which Paul Allen, Gen Bynd, the Rev Mr Pierpont, Judge Brackenridge, Neal, and other distinguished men, were then members. The second edition was published in 1819, and for "John O'Cataract," was substituted "John Neal."

The next literary enterprise in which Mr Neal was engaged, was a "History of the American Revolution"

At this period, 1820–23, Mr Neal began to write and to publish his remarkable novels. They were ushered into existence with wonderful rapidity. "Logan" in two volumes—over six hundred pages—first came into the world. It was published in Philadelphia in 1822. In 1823 "Seventy-Six," in two volumes was published in Baltimore. This novel is probably the most popular, the most interesting, and the best of all his novels. Soon after "Seventy-Six" came "Randolph," in two volumes which attracted extraordinary attention at the time, from the fact that the hero reviewed, and, criticised every thing he read and saw—our cities, our architecture, our manners, our ladies; and had something to say of every person he met—our orators, statesmen, lawyers, authors, poets and, painters. "Errata, or the works of Will Adams," was another novel in two volumes, which Mr Neal's active pen soon brought into the world. This also was published in 1823. Thus we have in a single year, eight volumes from the same person! In a note in Blackwood's Magazine, Mr Neal says he wrote "Randolph" in thirty-six days, with an interval of about a week between the two volumes, in which he wrote nothing; "Errata" in less than thirty-nine days; and "Seventy-Six" in twenty-seven days. During this time he was engaged in professional business, and they were written in the leisure and idle hours of a lawyer.

After the publication of these novels, Mr Neal's restless mind began to look about for a yet broader theatre of action. At home he had been caressed as a god, and denounced as a devil. So he made up his mind to go abroad. He embarked in the ship Franklin, of Baltimore, in December, 1823, and arrived in Liverpool, January, 1824.

After Mr Neal had sufficiently gratified his curiosity by viewing the lions of London, and its vicinity, he looked about him for a full field of action. Letters of introduction he had in abundance; but what are they worth, except a dinner, or a nod of the head, or a courteous shake of the hand? Even these, or but very few of these, he delivered; for he had concluded to stand upon his own foundation, and to make his way by his own abilities. His first literary attempt was in Blackwood's Magazine, in an article entitled "Sketches of the five American Presidents, and of the five candidates for the Presidency." This article was extensively circulated in this country and in Europe. Finding that there were great misapprehensions widely prevalent with regard to this country, he set himself to work to correct them, in the British Magazines, by writing under the guise of an Englishman. He did more, perhaps, than any American that ever went abroad, to impart just notions touching his own country. After Mr Neal had been in England nearly two years, he published "Brother Jonathan," a novel, in three large duodecimo volumes. This work, and his papers in Blackwood under the title of 'Yankee Notions," attracted the attention of many distinguished foreigners; and among others who noticed and admired his talents, was Jeremy Bentham. This acquaintance has tinged all Mr Neal's subsequent life and opinions. He is still a thorough disciple of that great philosopher.

After Mr Neal had seen as much as he wanted to see of England, and had spent between three and four years in that country, visiting different parts of the kingdom, he started for Paris. The time which he allotted for his journey was now over, and his eyes were again upon home. Hence, after visiting the curiosities of Paris, and travelling a short time in France, he embarked at Havre in a vessel bound to New York, where he arrived in June, 1827.

Mr Neal tarried but a short time in New York and Boston, when he returned home to Portland, the place of his nativity, where he has now established himself, as he says, for life.

The year after he returned home, he published 'Rachel Dyer,' another novel in one volume. The next publication from his pen was 'Authorship,' 8 vo pp 267—'A Tale by a New-Englander overseas.' The last volume which he published is 'Bentham's Morals and Legislation.'

Shortly after Mr Neal had established himself in Portland, he was solicited to edit a weekly newspaper. He consented, and entered with all his heart, and with energy, force and fire, into 'The Yankee.' It lived two years, and was then—mirabile dictu!—married to the Ladies' Magazine, published in Boston. When Willis, who was then editing the American Monthly Magazine, heard of this, he remarked that the mustard-pot had fallen into the milkpan. Since his abandonment of editorial life, Mr Neal has been now and then a correspondent for the magazines and newspapers. While the New England Magazine was under our charge, he contributed several striking articles.

John Neal is a married man—most happily married. His wife is said to be beautiful, accomplished, and—what is a better epithet than either of the foregoing—sensible. He lives in a pleasant house, neatly furnished, enjoys a competency, and practices the law. His eccentricities are smothered, but not extinguished. He may not be still John O'Cataract, but he is still, and ever will be, John Neal. At this present time he is in New York, and has delivered two capital lectures, after his rapid and splendid fashion, before the New York Lyceum, at the Broadway Tabernacle. He was in our office an hour the other day, and 'talked a good talk.' The language ripples off the end of his tongue like a running river. We take leave of him with the Persian's benediction: May he live a thousand years! May his shadow never be less!

NO 2, "OAK HALL." BY ONE OF ITS PATRONS.

Webster we place the foremost among men
With fame so great, his foes dare not condemn;
His mighty mind and legislative skill
All must admire, view him how they will;
There is another man less known to fame
Who yet has earned an enviable name;
The patient zeal he ever has displayed
Proclaims him now "the Webster of his trade!"
That noble building which he named "Oak Hall"
Rose from the Earth like magic at his call;
But though its splendors may our notice win
Its chief attractions can be found within!
"Oak Hall" may charm us! Yet we all confess
That Simmons's skill is most displayed in dress;
All classes here are clothed! the meek and vain
Yet all are pleased; and none did e'er complain;
While We's ever lives an honor to his race
With well earned fame that foremost takes it's place
The world still owns that one approaches DAN
And can be points at SIMMONS as the man.

IMPROVED SAFETY-VALVE AIR-TIGHT STOVES. These Stoves are constructed of the best materials and workmanship of four sizes. Of each size there are the Pyramid, the Ornamental and the Plain. To each is appended Morse's improved safety valve, which is at once ornamental and highly useful, entirely precluding the possibility of escape of smoke or gas during the ordinary process of combustion; but on the generating of an explosive gas, the valve instantly rises and presents an aperture five inches in diameter for its escape, after which it is invisibly resumes its position as perfect as before, not being liable to be thrown from its seat, and thus, by the admission of a current of air, fans the combustion of the fuel and fill the room with smoke during the night, or otherwise.

Also, the improved ARNOTT or COAL AIR-TIGHT, with internal columns for the circulation of heated air which, for convenience, comfort and economy, is not surpassed by any Stove yet before the public; together with an extensive assortment of the most approved coal and wood COOKING STOVES. Manufactured and for sale at lowest prices by D. PROUTY & CO.

PILFERING is becoming so notorious, that it behoves families, gentlemen travelling, and others to adopt those measures which may as much as possible contribute to prevent and detect it. In the article of linen or cotton apparel, silk and cotton stockings, table linen, &c, this cannot be better effected than by marking such property with CLARKE'S INDELIBLE PERMANENT INK, which from a test of 50 years, is found to be an improvement on the common durable, or permanent Ink, and much superior to any of those Inks which are used without a preparation.
