

THE INFLUENCE OF DEMOCRACY.

A NEW PAPER on the political, economical, and moral aspects of the age, may probably never be unacceptance to the readers of the Star, nor unconstructive in themselves.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

Agricultural Column.

CHEMISTRY AND VEGETABLE PHYSIOLOGY.—No. 1.—FARMING SEEDS.—From the Western Agriculturist.—Every seed is composed of two parts, the skin or outer covering and the kernel; with the former we have comparatively little to do.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

The Great Britain Steam Ship.

The first experimental trial of the engine of the steamship Great Britain took place on Wednesday last, in Cumberland Basin. The screw made thirty-five revolutions, at about half speed.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

Trades' Movements.

MACHINERY.—PUBLIC MEETING OF THE LABOURERS AND JOINERS.—A Public Meeting of the above body was held in the 'Arpenters' Hall, on the evening of Thursday, Dec. 5, for the purpose of laying before the assembly the accounts for the last year.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

MARKET INTELLIGENCE.

MARKET INTELLIGENCE.—LONDON COGNAC MARKET, Monday, Dec. 9.—The arrivals of cognac, &c., to this port, during the past week, are very small amount; but the demand is still very great.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

Bankrupts, &c.

BANKRUPTS, &c.—THOMAS ROSE, of Newcastle, bankrupt—BANKRUPTcies.—James Gilson, of Aldgate High-street, City, bankrupt; first dividend of 1s. in the pound, payable at 19, Aldermanbury, London, on Saturday.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

MARKET INTELLIGENCE.

MARKET INTELLIGENCE.—LONDON COGNAC MARKET, Monday, Dec. 9.—The arrivals of cognac, &c., to this port, during the past week, are very small amount; but the demand is still very great.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.

It is to be desired that the public mind should be brought to bear on the political and moral aspects of the age, and that the general feeling should be raised to a point where it will be able to judge of the merits of a measure, and to support or oppose it as it may appear to be the best for the country.